

Simpson University Honors 125 Graduates

The James M. Grant Student Life Center did double-duty on Jan. 20 as Simpson University hosted two commencement ceremonies for its newest graduates from all academic programs. Redding City Council member and Simpson alumnus Adam McElvain gave the commencement address to more than 125 graduates from the School of Adult Studies, School of Education, Betty M. Dean School of Nursing, School of Graduate Professional Studies, A.W. Tozer Theological Seminary, and the traditional undergraduate program. Remembering Dr. Francis Grubbs

Former Simpson University President Francis W. Grubbs, who passed away in December, oversaw critical years in the college's history as it moved from San Francisco to Redding in 1989. The Francis W. Grubbs Learning Center, one of the first buildings constructed on the Redding campus, was named for him.

Outdoor Leadership Students Embrace Challenges of Immersion Semester

At the group's farthest point out on a trail in the Tahoe area, the storm hit, sudden and fierce. For most of that night, five Simpson University Outdoor Leadership students huddled inside professor Rob Simpson's tent, bracing themselves each time wind gusts shook the frame. When morning came, they were wet and tired and still had 11 miles to hike – in a blizzard – to get out.
